

Renovations At Shawsheen 'Well Within' The Budget

By Sue Aucella Deacon

Renovations currently underway at the Shawsheen School to convert it into school administrative offices have unexpectedly aroused a bit of controversy among some parents and town officials.

School Superintendent Dr. Kenneth R. Seifert said this week that the renovations are modest at best, and "well within" the $88,000 budget approved by the school committee last spring.

And a shower in the superintendent's washroom that seems to have landed at the center of the controversy will cost the town nothing: Seifert said he will pay for the $305 shower himself.

With a total of 35,000 square feet in the school, he estimates that the renovations will cost 84 cents per square foot.

School offices lost their 11-year home in the Stowe School because it had to be demolished to make way for new construction at the Doherty School, as part of the school building program.

Shawsheen, closed this year due to declining enrollments, will house the offices temporarily. Seifert is not sure how long it may be before the offices will have to be moved again.

Enrollments are not declining as quickly as anticipated, and the Shawsheen may have to be reopened as a school, he explained. For that reason, the renovations have been designed so they can be undone easily.

The superintendent would not be sorry to see that happen, he said: "It would be a shame never to use this as a school building again."

Special Conference To Assist Arts Councils

In Springfield, free Sunday evening performances fill Forest Park with music and theatre. On the Cape—in Provincetown, Truro and Wellfleet—plans are underway for the annual Fall Festival on Sept. 17-20, when more than 75 professional artists and craftspeople will open their studios to the public.

In Lowell last year, a series of art lessons offered to senior citizens proved so popular that the class filled in one day. To the west, elementary school children in the 26 towns of Franklin County have been treated to an exciting range of experiences in music, theatre, dance and the like since the mid-70s.

All of these activities are sponsored by local arts councils, organizations devoted to creating lively cultural atmospheres in their communities. With Proposition 2½ cutting municipal funds and the loss of several federally funded programs like CETA, these small and energetic councils face a most demanding challenge—to do more with less.

To assist such groups, the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities is sponsoring a two-day working conference at Old Sturbridge Village on Sept. 24 and 25 for arts managers from around the state. Arts leaders will make presentations and lead discussions to generate new ideas on the running of programs and the sharing of resources and to explore the use of local advocacy as well as the potentially influential cable television.

"This is an era of declining public support for the arts, and community arts groups, because they are so new, will have a harder time surviving than the older institutions which have cultivated the traditional sources of support over the years," says Anne Hawley, executive director of the Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities. "Local arts councils do enjoy wide support from people, but they have not had time yet to secure funding from private sources. We are sponsoring this statewide conference to help 200 local arts representatives become more familiar with the types of support still available to them, as well as to explore the development of new sources of revenue."

"These local organizations," Hawley continues, "do so much to provide access for all citizens in the state to the arts and humanities by offering free or low-cost performances and workshops to people of all ages, by serving as a clearinghouse for information on local activities, and often by awarding funds to those groups that residents agree should be helped. Beyond that, they manage to employ literally hundreds of artists and humanists—from the musicians who play at concerts to talks by local historians."

"We do face hard times," agrees Mary Kay Hoffman, director of the Arts Council of Franklin County, founded by a group of parents determined to improve the arts programs in the schools. "With the enrichment funds cut throughout the system, we will be unable to continue to provide the types of services we have in the past. But change is not necessarily a bad word. We will simply do something different. Our current plan is to offer an in-depth visual arts program in our own facility."

One of the ways to develop community support, reports Bob Teigs of the Lower Cape Arts and Humanities Council, is to find new sponsors for specific programs. "We started an 'Art in the Bank' program here some time ago. We set up the system for selecting artwork, and the banks provided exhibition space. Now two of the banks have taken over the selection of artwork. We are no longer involved, but the art is still available to the public. I think that's great. We got the idea rilling, and now it has a life of its own."

No two arts councils are the same. The Lowell Arts Council, formed as an integral part of that city's government, has used the short year and a half of its existence to help fund a summer theatre, a foreign film festival, a design contest to find a product that could be manufactured by the handicapped, and then reached out to local businesses to secure wider support for the future.

An equally wide range of activities has been sponsored by the Mayor's Office of Community and Cultural Affairs (MOC-CA) in Springfield—from the painting of murals to the publication of a book of poems by prison inmates. A four-day festival, held over the 4th of July weekend, has become an annual tradition according to Deputy Commissioner Rick Norcross, who reports an attendance of more than 100,000 people who can choose from more than 75 performances. All for free.

"Local arts councils became a national phenomenon when people, no matter where they lived—in city neighborhoods, small towns, or suburbs, wanted arts events and programs available nearby," notes Anne Hawley. "These councils now provide an enormous service to the citizens of the Commonwealth. Our late September conference will assist these groups in meeting the many challenges of the next decade."

Those interested in additional information on the conference, "Planning for the Eighties," should contact Susan Hartnett, Mass. Council on the Arts and Humanities, One Ashburton Place, Boston, MA 02108 or call (617) 727-3668.

Cohen Is Speaker

State Rep. Gerald Cohen (D-And.), will deliver a legislative report to the Andover Town Democratic committee meeting in Memorial Hall Library, Thursday, Sept. 3, at 7:30 p.m.

The meeting is open to the public.

At Tabor

Three Andover residents will be entering Tabor Academy in Marion this month.

Those planning to attend include Stephen Caban, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Lozzi; Andrea Garcia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Angel M. Garcia and Geoffrey Pierson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Pierson.

Tabor, founded in 1876, is a co-ed boarding school of approximately 500 students offering a full college preparatory curriculum.

Selectmen Welcome New Personnel

The selectmen welcomed three new members to town departments Monday night, when they confirmed the appointments of a new Community Development and Planning director, new sanitarian and environmental affairs coordinator and a new firefighter.

James Gilmore of Windham, N.H., was named the new Community Development director, as announced by acting Town Manager Tony Torrisi last week. (A profile of the new director appears elsewhere in this edition of the Townsmen.)

Gilmore was welcomed most enthusiastically by Building Director Sam DeSalvo, who has doubled as the acting director since Rhys Kear resigned in June. Torrisi and the selectmen offered their appreciation to DeSalvo—and told him to keep up the good work until Gilmore comes aboard Sept. 14.

Also joining the Community Development Department Sept. 14 will be James Greer of Amesbury as sanitarian and environmental affairs coordinator. Greer has been an agent for the Amesbury Board of Health for the past two years, where he created a hazardous waste management committee. He succeeds Walter Eriksen, who resigned to accept a post in private industry.

And named a new firefighter was Andover resident Daniel Ferris, who has served as a dispatcher for the public safety departments.

Alternative Sentencing Returns

Subject to state approval of its new non-profit status, Andover's alternative sentencing program—also known as the pro bono publico program—will be back in action within a week or two, program director Mary Wesson reported to the selectmen Monday night.

The new program puts juvenile offenders to work, letting them make restitution for damages to the town by cleaning up town lands, for example, or doing other work for town agencies, under supervision. It also offers counseling to the young offenders.

The program was suspended for several weeks when the selectmen learned the town could be liable for workmen's compensation for program participants, and the cost of insuring them would be exorbitant.

The dilemma has been solved by creating a non-profit corporation to govern the program, called the Alternative Sentencing Program of Andover, Inc., Wesson told the board. The town will be covered for liability, property damage and client insurance by the Doherty Insurance Agency, which insures the town.

Acting Town Manager Tony Torrisi noted that Town Counsel Alfred Daniels was "instrumental" in establishing the non-profit corporation.

Annual Road Race Scheduled

The Community Services Department will hold its sixth annual road race on Sunday, Oct. 25, with the selectmen's approval.

The 5.1 mile race, which has attracted more local runners each year, will start on Lovejoy Road at 1 p.m. One of last year's participants was selectman Jerry Silverman. The road will be closed to traffic until 3 p.m.

The acting town manager Monday night recommended that the selectmen grant a permit for the race. The route is to be worked out in coordination with the police chief.

License Needed For Mopeds

Operators of Mopeds, or like vehicles, must have a driver's license or a learner's permit in order to ride them on public ways.

Andover Police Chief James Johnson reported this week that several youngsters have acquired such vehicles, probably in anticipation of returning to school. But, Johnson noted, police are finding that the operators are not in possession of a license or permit.

Five youngsters were caught Monday morning riding the vehicles on public ways and informed of the requirements.

Licenses, Permits Granted

The selectmen issued permits to the Faith Lutheran Church and the Bay State Gas Company Monday night, during a regular meeting at Memorial Hall Library.

The board granted a one-day, all-alcoholic license to the church for use at the church grounds on Saturday, Sept. 12.

The acting town manager recommended approval of the gas company permits, provided the work is performed to the satisfaction of the public works director.

Gibney To Be TV Guest

Jim Gibney of Andover will be one of two guests interviewed on a local Public Service TV program on Sunday, Sept. 6.

The show, "It's Your Life," hosted by Tom O'Connell, will be seen on Channel 25 at 7 a.m. and repeated at 11 p.m. The topics discussed are Fundamentalism, Evangelicals and Charismatics: How they are working together around the country to pray for an "America for Jesus"; and the local effort in Massachusetts and New England.

The other guest on the show is Rev. John Gimenez, national chairman of "America for Jesus" (AFJ) and pastor of Rock Church, Virginia Beach, Va., which has over 3,000 members.

Gibney lives with his wife, Erika, and two daughters, Lisa and Laura, at 5 Wild Rose Drive. They moved from Reading three years ago where he served on the town Finance Committee and as an elected Town Meeting member.

Currently, Gibney is the spiritual life director for the Christian Broadcasting Network (CBN) and the 700 Club where he directs the Counseling Center, and serves as the chaplain for Channel 25 in Needham. In addition to involvement in other Christian activities, he is the Massachusetts State Director for "America for Jesus" and will coordinate the "New England for Jesus" effort in Boston.

Gibney was born and brought up in Lynn where he graduated from St. Mary's High in 1959 and Boston University in 1968. Prior to joining CBN on Dec. 1, 1980, he worked for General Electric Co., IBM, and several federal agencies in Boston, the last being HEW.

Regional Theatre Announces Schedule

Artistic director Mark Kaufman and managing director Patricia Littrell-Wayne announced the 1981-82 season for MRT's third year of professional theatre in the Merrimack Valley.

"The Miracle Worker," by William Gibson (Oct. 30-Nov. 22), is the true story of Helen Keller. Helen, blind and mute, is taught to escape from a world of dark, tortured silence by Annie Sullivan, an Irish girl who had been born blind herself. A tender, moving play with emotion-packed scenes which is a must for audiences of all ages.

In "The Lion In Winter," by James Goldman (Nov. 27-Dec. 20), the three sons

King Henry II had by Eleanor of Aquitaine want to rule England after his death. Uneasy is the head the crown rests on, and revolution seems imminent.

Can a cultured Gentile lawyer and a plain Jewish girl from the Bronx find true happiness? "Two For The Seesaw," by William Gibson (Jan. 22, 1982-Feb. 14, 1982), is a romantic, absorbing and delightful story.

What is the value of a man's possessions? In "The Price," by Arthur Miller (Feb. 19-March 14), two brothers sell the belongings of their deceased father and find the true value is more than dollars and cents. A moving, dramatic work about ambition and reality.

"The Mousetrap," by Agatha Christie (April 16-May 9), has been running in London for over 20 years. This classic thriller has a group of strangers stranded in an English boarding house during a snowstorm. One of them is a murderer; but which one? Agatha Christie weaves a spell of mystery and intrigue which lures the audience into her trap. A delight for the entire family.

Season subscriptions are available by calling the Box Office or by writing to Merrimack Regional Theatre, P.O. Box 228, Lowell, MA 01853.

Subscriptions include restaurant discounts as well as discounts at other area professional theatres.

Project Aware Provides Environmental Understanding

Take 36 agile, eager, high-spirited West Junior High seventh graders; place them in the 55 wooded acres of outdoor school at Camp Manequoit in Orleans adjacent to the spacious natural setting of Cape Cod National Seashore; include three classroom teachers assisted by high school counselors (most of whom are graduates of the program); scramble in several National Park Service rangers and local guest speakers for local flavor; combine some plant study, animal study, geology, meteorology and conservation; add heaps of recreation and a dash of adventure and then, let everything marinate for one school week.

This outdoor recipe rarely fails to satisfy. It is the true essence of learning, a dish that has for too many years been limited to the four walls of a classroom. This recipe calls for learning by doing. It includes liberal doses of sensory awareness—seeing, touching, smelling and even tastin'. It's a formula for independence and self-reliance. It's a mixture of insight, understanding and experience. It begins just outside the cabin door and reaches to infinity. It cannot always be measured in terms of tangible results, but its outcomes are positive. It's a recipe for learning bounded by an entirely new student-teacher relationship—one of deeper understanding and mutual appreciation.

AWARE stands for Andover west Activities in Recreational and Environmental Education. The participants represent a select group of students who have earned the privileges by meeting various prerequisites, including raising their share of the costs. The 36 students were led by Jay Darrin, Brian Staples and Les Taylor. The program utilized the Cape Cod National Seashore as an outdoor classroom. Students spent part of each day exploring a different portion of the seashore. The variety of habitats for field study included fresh-water lake, salt marsh, swamp, bog, pinewood forest and grassy meadow. The campus at Camp Namequoit offered numerous recreational facilities.

Seminar

Runners, coaches, trainers and physicians will learn about the latest advances in the dynamics of running at St. Elizabeth's Hospital's Running Seminar, Saturday, Sept. 26, 8 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Whether newcomer to the field or seasoned professional, the program provides specialized information.

In tandem with the seminar, St. Elizabeth's Runners' Clinic will host "10 Kilometers over Heartbreak Hill," a 6.2 mile road race on Sunday, Sept. 27, at 3 p.m. Proceeds from the weekend activities support medical research in prevention of sports injuries.

Children's Films

Films for youngsters 3 to 8 are offered at the Rabb Lecture Hall of the Boston Public Library, Fridays at 10:30 a.m. Admission free; at Copley Square.

The primary objective of the AWARE program is to create a greater awareness in the student of the environment. Each day, students are required to integrate English, math, science and geography skills within the theme of the environment. A great deal of learning also comes from the community living experience. Since the camp was unstaffed, the group was responsible for upkeep of buildings and grounds. Each student had a daily job to complete, such as helping prepare meals, washing pots and pans, or serving meals. Student cabins were engaged in friendly competition throughout the week.

Each day was active and had its own highlights. Monday featured the Buttonbush Trail sensory walk. Students were blindfolded and followed a trail designed for the sightless. Most enjoyed the shellfish talk and demonstration by "Sam Clam" and "Capt. Hook," local "old salts."

Tuesday's highlight was a study of the plant communities along the Atlantic White Cedar Swamp Trail. The volleyball tournament produced lots of spirited play and good sportsmanship.

Wednesday morning's Nauset Light Beach scavenger hunt turned up some interesting discoveries. The group kite-flying competition along the beach was fun, but the day's highlight was the sale marsh exploration. Students gained first-hand knowledge of these fascinating areas and the many forms of life that inhabit them by wading through the mud and cord grass. The evening bar-b-que climaxed an exciting day.

Thursday began with an environmental art sand sculpture by each cabin on Skaket Beach. After exploring the plants and animals of the tidal pools, the group returned to the campus for the Laugh-A-Lympics—a series of individual and group contests involving land and water events.

Friday was highlighted by a bicycle ride through the dunes to Race Point Beach and Ranger Perry's presentation on fishing and seamen's knots. Spotting passing whales caused lots of excitement. Most students saved enough energy to scale the towering dunes. Before returning to Andover, the group enjoyed a seafood dinner at Baxter's, a famous Hyannis seaside restaurant.

The comforts of home were appreciated by all upon their return, but everyone agreed that it had been a very exciting and rewarding experience. The campers particularly valued the efforts of high school counselors, Jeff Canovitch, Bobby French and Paul Yannalfo.

All 36 students received a Certificate of Participation for successfully completing the one-week AWARE program. They were Tom DeLeire, Chris Scanlon, Kelly McCann, Robert Mattedi, Karin Mesler,

John Tomlinson, David S. Cox, Lucille Sciolli, Andy Schulz, Arlene Ciaccia, Lisa Oberst, Amy Heartquist, Maura Dunn, Lisa Froburg, Mosa Kaleel, Lisa Haley, Melissa Marquis, Alison Hardy, Gail Burke, Debbie Cookson, Allison Reghitto, Debbie Clinton, Leah Lury, Russell Henderson, Bryan Poisson, Jennifer Cook, Kim McGinley, Laura Cervone, Meredith McCracken, Heather Domingue, Larry Prestia, Phil Boulanger, Tim Donovan and Billy Bruno.

St. Augustine's Students Above Norm

Results of the Iowa Test of Basic Skills in Achievement given to students at Saint Augustine's School last spring show the students are at least one grade level above the national standardized level in language and mathematics skills, school officials announced last week.

Master's Degree Offered

A new Master of Science in Nursing degree program for part-time graduate students has been announced by Salem State College President Dr. James T. Amsler and Dr. Nancy Harrington, dean of the Division of Graduate and Continuing Education.

Information on the program and on enrollment procedures may be obtained from the Division of Graduate and Continuing Education.

The first courses in the MS in Nursing will be offered in the January-May 1982 evening session. Nurses who have earned a Bachelor's degree with a major in Nursing from an institution accredited by the National League for Nursing will be eligible for admission.

Participants will select courses designed to provide a specialization in a clinical area as well as courses which focus on leadership in functional roles. Salem State has established Community Health and Adult Care Nursing for clinical specializations, on the basis of identified community needs; and leadership training will prepare students as nursing administrators and nursing educators.

The Nursing Department at Salem State College recently was awarded the G. Theodore Mitau Award by the American Association of State Colleges and Universities for excellence and innovation in higher public education.

The standardized achievement test, published most recently this year by the Houghton Mifflin company, was given to students in grades one through eight.

Students in grades three through six showed the greatest achievement in total language skills: the third-graders tested at the fifth grade level; the fourth-graders, at sixth grade level; fifth-graders, at more than a seventh grade level; and sixth-graders, at more than an eighth grade level, in vocabulary as well as total language skills. Each placed in the 94th percentile or higher on a national scale.

In the other subjects tested, the third grade students achieved more than a fourth grade level in vocabulary, reading, and math; the fourth-graders, higher than a fifth grade level in those subjects; fifth-graders, better than a sixth grade level in those subjects; and the sixth-grade students, better than a seventh grade level in reading and math.

First-grade students achieved a second grade level in word analysis, vocabulary, reading and math, placing in the 95th percentile or better in each subject.

Second grade students tested at the third grade level or higher in the same subjects, placing in the 62nd to 97th percentile range, depending on the subject.

Students in the seventh grade scored at higher than an eighth grade level in vocabulary, reading, total language and math skills, placing in the 74th to 86th percentile range in those subjects.

Residents Promoted At Bank

Nancy Lanigan

Three Andover residents were recently elected or promoted to new positions at the BayBank, Merrimack Valley. Chairman of the Board Trumbull C. Curtiss has announced.

Scott D. White has been elected auditor. A graduate of the University of Rhode Island, White received his master's degree in management from New Hampshire College. He joined the Audit department of the bank in 1979 and was elected assistant auditor in 1980. White is a member of the Institute of International Auditors.

Nancy Lanigan has been named assistant operations officer. She joined the Operations department of the bank in 1979. In her new position, her responsibilities will be in the areas of time deposit, control and electronic funds transfer. Lanigan is a graduate of Our Lady of Nazareth Academy and Westfield State College.

And Cynthia A. Stableford has been named assistant investment officer. She joined the bank in the Financial Control and Planning division in 1980. In her new position, she will head a "Money Desk" operation to coordinate all customer investments.

Cynthia A. Stableford

Scott D. White

Stableford is a graduate of Moravian Academy and Vassar College. She resides at Phillips Academy with her husband, Jonathan, and children, where she serves as associate cluster dean and house counselor.

Openings At Academy

Openings in this fall's freshman class at Our Lady of Nazareth Academy still exist at this writing. As the enrollment at the academy has increased in recent years, the selection process has become more stringent. This year only 85 girls out of 189 who applied were accepted and have enrolled in the academy for September classes. Because applicants must meet such high standards, about a dozen places remain for academically qualified girls who demonstrate genuine interest in a Catholic education at Nazareth.

Any parents interested in more information about the application process should contact the main office of Our Lady of Nazareth Academy in Wakefield as soon as possible.

Condo Bylaw Appeal Awaits Counsel Advice

THE TOWNSMAN, SEPTEMBER 3, 1981

The selectmen met with Planning Board and Zoning Board of Appeals members to discuss the town's disputed condominium conversion bylaw last Wednesday night, but left without hearing much "feedback" from either board. Selectmen Chairman Norma Gammon later reported.

The boards are reserving comment until they hear new information from Town Counsel Alfred Daniels and Special Town Counsel Thomas Arnold on the bylaw that Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti has declared illegal.

The selectmen, also awaiting new information, have yet to decide whether they will continue their appeal against the attorney general's ruling so the condo conversion bylaw can stand. Gammon said she did not know when the selectmen might make that decision.

Among the information the boards are interested in is pending legislation that would give cities and towns without rent control the power to regulate condominium conversion, under the home rule provision of state law. State Senator Patricia McGovern is working on that legislation, Gammon explained.

Bellotti ruled against the bylaw, passed by annual town meeting in June, because he found that home rule does not give municipalities the power to control condominium conversions, unless they have rent control.

"We were asking the planning board and zoning board if they had any problems with the bylaw, if they thought it could be enforced," Gammon said, "but we got no answers one way or the other."

"We did throw some ideas around," the chairman added, concerning the question of whether "people in Andover are interested in condominiums, or aren't they?"

Annual town meeting gave strong support to the condo bylaw, which had the backing of the Council on Aging and a large group of residents of the Washington Park apartment complex on North Main Street.

The bylaw would give tenants one year's notice before their apartments could be converted into condos, and would require developers to obtain special permits from the zoning board before they could convert rental units.

But since the attorney general struck down the bylaw, Washington Park has been sold, and its 156 units are being converted into condos by Cohen Properties of Brookline.

A group of Washington Park tenants who plan to buy condominiums there appeared before the selectmen earlier this month, urging the board to drop their appeal against Bellotti's ruling. The court case, they argued, will merely complicate the Special Needs Courses Offered

A cooking and a drivers education permit course will be held this fall for adults 18 years of age and older who are mildly to moderately developmentally disabled. The classes will begin on Monday, Sept. 14, and Tuesday, Sept. 14, respectively. The cooking course will be held at the YWCA in Lawrence from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. for six weeks. This course is limited. Registration is at the YWCA during the first week of September.

The drivers permit course has been developed to familiarize the students with information needed to pass the permit test given by the Massachusetts Registry of Motor Vehicles. The course will be offered through the Lawrence Auto School and held at the Fidelity House, Inc. offices, 20

Pemberton St., Lawrence, on Monday and Tuesday evenings 6:30-8 p.m. The permit course involves 30 classroom hours. Students must attend classes until the required number of hours has been completed.

These two programs have been put together through the efforts of a committee recently formed to explore the educational needs and services for developmentally disabled adults in the Greater Lawrence area. A monthly calendar of classes and activities available will be published beginning in September. For further information or suggestions for future classes, contact Joyce Glenn Miller at the Department of Mental Health, High Street, Andover.

Entries Due

Paintings, photographs and sculpture to be exhibited at the North Suburban Art Exhibit, Sept. 25, 26 and 27, will be received at the American Mutual Insurance Companies' home office in Wakefield on Thursday, Sept. 10, from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Applications will be available at the registration desk.

The exhibit, which benefits the Citizens' Scholarship Foundation of Wakefield, will be judged by Tom O'Hara of Cambridge and Rockport, Dudley of Sudbury, and James Ross Chisholm of Revere.

sales and make it more expensive for tenants who want to buy their units.

Other townspeople added that condos are desirable because they would allow residents who can't afford houses here to remain in town. They pointed out that apartments are scarce in Andover.

But town meeting has demonstrated serious opposition to new multi-family housing in Andover twice during the past year at a special town meeting last November, when voters disapproved a multi-family housing bylaw that would have allowed new condos on Andover Street, and at the opening session of the annual meeting, when they disapproved a multi-family housing bylaw developed by the planning board.

At the close of Wednesday night's meeting, selectmen went into executive session with Atty. Daniels and Arnold to discuss the status of their appeal against the attorney general's ruling.

Some townspeople are apparently concerned that elaborate remodeling is being done at the school, while bus routes have been cut back and user fees have been imposed on athletics and music lessons to deal with Proposition 2½.

But Seifert explained that of $71,595 spent on the conversion to date, only $29,398 has been spent on renovations. The rest of the budgeted funds has been spent on moving furniture and equipment ($9,813), moving telephones ($10,859), and moving and installing computers ($21,525).

The renovation figure includes carpentry ($11,554), plumbing ($3,432), electrical work ($5,562), new flooring ($1,600), new walls ($3,249), and new doors and locks ($4,001).

The school committee budgeted $69,000 for the move, Seifert said, with $19,000 from savings on utility expenses to be used as a contingency fund. The original figure did not include the cost of moving the school equipment out of the Shawsheen, housing the computer, and the cost of renting space to store $29,000 worth of equipment salvaged from the demolished Stowe and Jackson schools.

The town will save an estimated $40,000 in utilities next year by closing down Stowe and Jackson, he added.

Some visitors to the school have criticized the arched doorways, ceilings with track lighting, and wall-to-wall carpeting (slightly worn), the superintendent said. But he pointed out that those features were all part of the school, already there when the administrators moved in.

"The infamous shower," he added, was actually the idea of two maintenance men, who installed it without his knowledge while Seifert was away on vacation. "They thought it might be nice for the workaholics in the administration who put in 14 and 16 hour days to be able to clean up before they go to night-time meetings," he explained.

The shower fit within the budget, but the superintendent said he decided to pay for it himself to silence any criticism. "When I leave," he said with a smile, "I am going to donate that shower to the schools. And I'm going to hang a plaque with my name over it."

The large windows in Seifert's office are curtainless, and will remain without curtains until draperies from Stowe can be remade to fit the new windows. There is no new furniture in his office, he said.

A tour of the rest of the school showed the renovations to consist largely of partitions to divide open classroom space into offices, paint, some paneling, and new plumbing to convert child-sized bathrooms into adult facilities. Electrical outlets have been added to accommodate copying machines and typewriters, and new locks added to outside doors.

There are two conference rooms, one for administrative use, and one for teachers. Seifert explained that with the Shawsheen closing, the remaining elementary schools are too crowded to leave space for even one teacher's conference room.

The school also includes two dining rooms for senior citizens in the basement, storage room for the town's Civil Defense equipment, and the Community Services department's offices.

Administration staffers "deserve a lot of credit" for "enduring really substandard" working conditions at the Stowe School for 11 years, the superintendent said.

School employees at times felt like "second-class citizens" working in a building with unreliable heating (employees often had to work with their coats on), "plastic on the windows," and two toilets for up to 40 employees, he explained.

Visitors often found the Stowe "atrocious," he added. "I realize that many townspeople remember the Stowe nostalgically as the great old place where they went to school," Seifert said, "but it was not the place for putting your best foot forward with a progressive school system. There were a number of embarrassing moments for me there.

"Now we have something that is reasonable," he said of the Shawsheen facilities. "It is not ostentatious. But the workers feel they are being given better working conditions."

"At last we're coming out into the sunlight."

Revaluation Seen As Threat To Town's 'Green Belt'

By Sue Aucella Deacon

The greatest threat Andover's "green belt" of open land has ever faced may be revaluation, townspeople told the selectmen Monday night — and they asked the selectmen to do as much as they can to save that land.

Taxpayers filled the Memorial Hall library conference room to hear Eugene Tworek, project director for PRC Jacobs, the firm conducting the town's revaluation to 100 percent of full and fair market value. Tworek appeared before the selectmen to discuss the current status of the revaluation project.

Rebecca Backman of Foster's Pond said revaluation "endangered the concept" of preserving the open space "Andover has prided itself" on, because many landowners will be unable to pay the higher taxes resulting from their new assessments. Those owners, she said, will be "forced to sell" their open land to developers.

"I don't think anybody wants to see Andover grow to an 80,000 population town, but I think that's what will happen," Judy Lugus, also of Foster's Pond, added. "People won't be able to pay these tax bills."

Lugus told the selectmen they should take responsibility for helping landowners find out how they might preserve their land. "What can people do?" she asked. "This should fall in the hands of the selectmen."

Conservation Commissioner Dina Hammond agreed with both women. "Open land is going to be very much threatened," she said. "I think an awful lot of it is going to be dumped on the market in the next year."

Hammond recommended that a committee be formed to offer information to taxpayers on the options they might have for preserving their land, which could be categorized as farmland, forestland, or open land.

"We should have some place people can go for information and some relief on this matter," she said. "I think the board of selectmen ought to take the lead in this."

The selectmen offered no response to that suggestion.

The Foster's Pond residents both said the selectmen had failed to give PRC Jacobs the "guidance" it needed to understand the "philosophy" of preserving open space in Andover. Backman asked if that philosophy had been changed.

Selectman Susan Poore explained later that the selectmen have "no legal jurisdiction" over revaluation, but that it falls to Jacobs and the Board of Assessors.

Although most of the residents directed their questions at Tworek for two hours Monday night, the selectmen occasionally stepped in to offer their own thoughts on the new assessments.

Bill MacDonald of Candlewood Drive said that in his nine-year-old neighborhood of Capes, Garrisons and split-levels, all of the houses originally sold for within $20,000 of one another. Now, he said, the same houses have been revalued at "a whole range of differences. There are $50,000 differences within the Capes alone."

"Something is wrong," MacDonald said. "I don't really think something is wrong," Selectman Donn Byrne responded. "People, out-of-staters, will pay that amount of money for a house here. It isn't worth it," he added, "but people will pay it."

And Patricia Thornton of Jenkins Road asked, "What happened to (Proposition) 2½ and relief for the taxpayer? Are anyone's taxes going down? What is the point of 2½?"

"Somewhere out there, a lot of people are paying less," Selectman Jerry Silverman told her. "They are there."

"And they're keeping their mouths shut," Byrne added.

"Where do they live?" Thornton wondered, to laughter from the audience.

Tworek opened the discussion by explaining that new assessments were mailed to approximately 9,000 residential property-owners on Aug. 12, and to about 375 industrial and commercial property-owners on Aug. 21.

About 3,050 taxpayers have contacted Jacobs to date, requesting appeals hearings on their assessments — most of them

Now You're Cooking

As promised, I have some very nice canning recipes this month as well as some sauce ideas that are exquisite. I'm sorry I couldn't use all the recipes I've received, but I'm only passing on the ones I've been able to try. That's not to say they all aren't delicious, but it wouldn't be fair of me to pass on something to you that I'm not sure of. And the ones you find here — I'm certain of. The canning recipes require the boiling bath method and for those of you unfamiliar with canning, don't be afraid of it. There are many books on the subject in the library and in any book store. It's fun, economical and there is a certain amount of pride one gets from opening the pantry and seeing those jars with your labor of love in them. If you feel leery about canning, drop me a line and I'll steer you onto some professionals in the matter. For now, on with the show:

Basic Tomato Mixture

20 lbs. firm ripe tomatoes
(about 60 medium)
2 tbsp salt
1 tsp celery salt
3 tbsp Worcestershire sauce
2 tsp onion powder
1/4 tsp tabasco

Drop tomatoes into boiling water to remove skins. Place peeled tomatoes in large kettle over high heat. Add remaining ingredients, bring to full boil stirring frequently to prevent sticking. Cook 5 minutes. Remove from heat and ladle mixture into colander straining liquid into large bowl. Reserve liquid for Tangy Tomato Cocktail. Reserve tomato pulp for Spicy Spaghetti Sauce.

Tangy Tomato Cocktail: Taste the juice and adjust seasonings to your taste. Add 1 tsp celery salt. If you find the juices too tart add 1 to 2 tsp sugar. Heat till boiling. Pour into quart canning jars, adjust lids and process in boiling water bath 10 minutes. Makes 4 quarts.

Spicy Spaghetti Sauce

Transfer pulp into another container without passing through colander. Add 1 lb. oregano, 2 cloves garlic, 2 tbsp Worcestershire sauce in blender about 2 cups at a time, blend till smooth. Make sure tomato skins are blended. Heat mixture till boiling. Pour into pint canning jars, adjust lids and process 10 minutes in boiling water bath. About 7 pints. The following sauces from Nancy Perry are delicious over vegetables.

Simple Cheese Sauce

1 can cream of celery soup
1/2 cup grated cheddar
1/2 cup milk
1/4 tsp paprika

Mix over low heat till cheese melts. Delicious over all vegetables.

Dilly Sauce

1 tbsp butter
1/2 cup water
1 tbsp flour
1/2 tsp salt
1/4 tsp garlic salt
1/2 tsp sugar
1 cup sour cream
2 tsp dill weed

Add first 6 ingredients and cook till thickened. Add dill and sour cream. Heat but do not boil. Super on hot carrots or zucchini strips.

Frozen Sauce Cubes Tomato Sauce Cubes

1/4 cup butter
1/2 cup flour
16 oz can tomato paste
1 tsp prepared mustard
2 tsp sugar
2 tsp onion powder
2 tsp salt
1/2 tsp basil
1/4 tsp pepper
1/4 tsp garlic powder
1 tbsp olive oil
3/4 white wine

Melt butter in pan, remove from heat. Add flour and stir till moistened. Add remaining ingredients except wine. Stir till smooth. Gradually add white wine. Freeze in plastic ice cube tray, when frozen, pop out and store in baggies.

Note: Add 6 cubes to 3/4 cup milk for a nice bowl of tomato soup.

Cheese Sauce Cubes

18 oz pkg sharp process cheese
3/4 cup white wine
1/3 cup butter
1/2 cup flour
1 1/2 tsp salt
1 tsp dry mustard
2 tsp Worcestershire sauce
1/2 cup nonfat dry milk
2 tbsp water

Grate cheese, add to wine in saucepan. Heat over low heat stirring occasionally until melted and smooth.

Melt butter in another saucepan, remove from heat. Add flour. Stir till smooth. Stir in salt, mustard, and Worcestershire sauce, add melted cheese. Stir till smooth. Add milk and 2 tbsp water. Stir till smooth, freezer store.

Cheese Sauce: Add 6 frozen cubes to 3/4 cup milk. Cook over medium heat till thick and smooth. Make 3/4 cup. Great with green beans, cauliflower florets, chopped broccoli, etc.

These frozen sauce cubes are so very delicious and convenient to have on hand. You really should try them. Good old Nancy Perry. It's amazing to learn how talented your friends are.

Bread & Butter Pickles (Superb)

4 qts sliced unpared med. cucumbers
6 med white onions, sliced (6 cups)
1 1/2 cups sliced green peppers
3 cloves garlic (whole)
1/3 cup granulated pickling salt
5 cups sugar
3 cups cider vinegar
1 1/2 tsp turmeric
1 1/2 tsp celery seed
2 tbsp mustard seed

Combine first 4 ingredients. Add salt, cover with cracked ice. Mix well. Let stand 3 hours, drain well. Remove garlic. Combine remaining ingredients. Pour over cucumber mixture. Bring to a full boil. Fill sterilized jars to 1/2 inch from the top. Adjust lids. Process in boiling water bath for 5 minutes. Makes 8 pints. A good point to remember is when timing your boiling water bath always start when the water begins boiling after the jars have been placed in.

We had such a wonderful vacation at Rehoboth Beach, Delaware and while we were there I was introduced to a great salad called the Watergate Salad. Sooo good.

Watergate Salad from Pat Renault

1 pistachio pudding mix 3 oz
1 small can crushed pineapple (undrained)
1 cup min. marshmallows
1/2 cup coconut
1 cup walnuts
1 10 oz container Cool Whip

Make pudding according to package directions and pour into bowl. Add remaining ingredients except Cool Whip. Mix well when jelled, top with Cool Whip. Cool and refreshing.

Crazy Pizza Pie

From Doris Lindsay Of
The Norwood Group

1 lb lean ground chuck
1/2 cup chopped onion
6 (six) oz cooked spaghetti
2 eggs (well beaten)
2 tbsp butter
1/3 cup Parmesan Cheese
8 oz Cottage or Ricotta Cheese
Pizza Sauce (Prince's) jar

Brown beef and onion lightly. Drain very well! Add Pizza Sauce and set aside. Cook six oz spaghetti and drain (be sure to add tsp oil or butter to boiling water). Immediately add mixture of beaten eggs, butter and Parmesan Cheese. Place spaghetti mix into 10" quiche pan which has been well buttered. Add layer of cottage cheese (distribute evenly to act as seal). Top with meat sauce. Bake uncovered at 350° for 20 minutes. Remove from oven and sprinkle with 4-6 oz shredded Mozzarella. Return to oven for 10 minutes. Remove from oven, place on rack and allow it to rest 10 minutes before serving (this is important).

Delicious! Doris served it with salad and garlic bread.

Salad Dressing

Any time I hear a six-year-old boy ask for a recipe for salad dressing I figure it must be special, so I asked him for the recipe and he is right. This is great. From James Robinson Renault.

"Aunt Thelma's Dressing"

1 cup Crisco Oil
1/4 cup vinegar
1 tsp paprika
2 tbsp sugar
1/2 cup ketchup
1 tsp salt
dash of Worcestershire sauce

Shake well — will keep for a long time. This is especially good on a raw thin sliced cucumber and zucchini salad. The kids love it!

The Professional Touch

This month's professional touch comes from Chef Charles McCann of the Lanam Club and is it wonderful.

Medallions Of Veal With Cucumber (serves 4)

1 1/4 lbs veal (ask the butcher for Plume de Veau) and have it cut into four 5 oz cutlets.
1 medium cucumber sliced
1/2 cup sour cream
1/4 cup light cream
salt & pepper

Pound cutlets and cut into quarters. Saute veal and cucumbers in butter till lightly browned. Add sour cream and light cream, simmer for 5 minutes, salt and pepper to taste. To serve alternate veal and cucumbers in a row on a platter and sprinkle with paprika.

Thank you, Chef Charles.

P.S. I hope Chef Charles won't be offended, but I tried his recipe with boneless chicken breast and loved it too!

The Kiddies Corner

This month I had a most fascinating visit to Los Angeles in which my flight was delayed and I got to spend several hours at the L. A. Airport with Mickey Mouse. He was excited about giving me a recipe for the Andover TOWNSMAN and all his friends here in Andover. He gave me two that he says are his favorites.

Mickey's Chicken Casserole

2 cups diced cooked chicken
1 cup chicken gravy (leftover or canned)
2 tbsp chopped green pepper
1/4 tsp salt
1/4 tsp pepper
2 cups cooked pasta
1 tbsp butter
2 tbsp Parmesan Cheese

Pre-heat oven to 350: Mix first ingredients and pour into casserole (1 1/2 qt.) Arrange the pasta on top. Dot with butter and sprinkle with cheese. Cover and bake for 20 minutes. Uncover and bake for 10 minutes more. If you love cheese you can add chunks of cheddar or American before baking.

Mickey told me these are his favorite cookies.

Mickey's Sugar Cookies

1 egg
1/2 cup butter, melted
1 cup sugar
1/2 tsp cinnamon
2 tbsp milk
1 tsp lemon juice
2 cups all purpose flour
1 tsp baking powder

Pre-heat oven to 400: Beat egg, add all ingredients up to flour. Beat with mixer until creamy. Sift dry ingredients and add to mixture. Mix well with spoon and drop dough by the teaspoonful onto 2 greased baking sheets leaving 1 inch space between them. Bake 8-10 minutes till golden brown.

Mickey has some other good recipes and you can find them in the Disneyland Cookbook.

According to Bernie Smith, author of "Trivia," Mrs. O'Leary's cow never started the Chicago fire that killed 200 people and burned out 17,000 buildings in 1871. The story was his own creation to give "color to his journalism."

Did you ever wonder where the term bootlegger originated? Well, it all started when the government made it illegal to sell alcohol to the American Indian. Unscrupulous adventurers sold it anyway, smuggling bottles in the leg of their boots. Just a little trivia from Jimmy Menton of Coast Lighting.

Please remember to clean, dust and oil your sewing machine after the summer vacations or you'll wind up with big unnecessary repair bills.

Choral Group Seeks Vocalists

The North Parrish Choral Society of Andover is now recruiting vocalists for the upcoming 1981-82 season.

Their first concert will kickoff a string of exciting performances. Mozart's Missa Brevis in B flat, complete with two vocal quartets and organ accompaniment, will highlight the season opener. Friday evening, Oct. 9, at Methuen Music Hall.

"Winter-on-Avon," an original composition by music director Marie Stultz, will premiere this Christmas, and the St. Valentine's Day Revels, an evening of Elizabethan merry-making, will be presented in February.

All interested singers are invited to join now. Weekly Tuesday evening rehearsals will begin Sept. 1, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at Faith Lutheran Church, Rte. 28. Andover.

For further information, call Marie Stultz.

To Resume Activity

The new president of the Spade and Trowel Garden Club, Mrs. Dorothy Moulton, will preside over the opening meeting.

A shoebox surprise dinner will be held at the home of Mrs. Barbara Pearson on Sept. 8 at 6:30 p.m. Co-hostesses are Mrs. Mary Donovan and Mrs. Florence Andersen.

Rudy Rotolo on Greenwood Road has grown some fabulous hot red peppers this year and would like to know if anyone has a successful method of drying and storing them. Can anyone give Rudy a few suggestions?

Meg Galaleurda on Blueberry Hill Road has a marvelous way of preparing and freezing casseroles, lasagnas etc. She lines her casserole dish with a generous amount of foil before filling it. When filled she places it in the freezer until frozen, then lifts the whole thing out of the dish, wraps and stores it leaving the casserole dish free, to be used again.

Sue Sherkat on Woodhaven Drive has a terrific frosting idea for brownies that my family loves. Prepare your favorite brownie recipe and as soon as you remove it from the oven place two plain chocolate Hershey Bars on it, breaking the bars and distributing the little squares evenly on top of the brownies. Wait 5 minutes and spread the chocolate evenly, garnishing the top with evenly placed walnuts. Easy and Delicious.

Unfortunately, due to all the red tape involved Damien hasn't been able to get that famous kitchen into operation. Hopefully after one last visit from one of the local inspectors we will all be enjoying his gourmet treats in September. I'll keep you posted.

Incidentally Mary Meyers of High Plain Road, dropped me a note to say the Turkey Casserole recipe she used was Julia Childs "Turkey Orloff", available in the book Julia Child and Company.

Thank you for all the nice comments we've been receiving concerning this column. We are pleased that you like it and look forward to receiving your recipes and ideas.

See you next month!

The bride was given in marriage by her father.

Any Burns was maid of honor; Holly Johnson, Heidi McInnis and Barbara Bushee served as bridesmaids. Dean Johnson served as best man and ushers were Craig McInnis and Jack Lennon.

The bride, a graduate of Mary C. Wheeler School in Providence, R.I., works as an area supervisor for Weathervane Stores.

Her husband is a graduate of the University of Massachusetts and is a district sales manager for Shop-Vac. They will reside in Hanson.

The Massachusetts Nurses Association, District IV, is offering a continuing education program for registered nurses on Sept. 15, entitled "Alternative birthing Methods." The program will be held at the Kings Grant Inn, Danvers, at 7 p.m. The faculty for the program is Joan Richards and Fran Ventre, both registered nurses and certified nurse-midwives from the North Shore Birth Center, Beverly. Walk-in registration will be accepted on a space-available basis.

Museum Seeks Volunteers

Do you want to give someone a real "eye-opener"? Ready to share a great "discovery"? Or just willing to lead the way? If so, then the Museum of Science wants you for its volunteer program.

The museum offers men and women volunteers an on-going educational opportunity in exchange for a half-day-per-week commitment, either weekdays or weekends. These give-and-take assignments put the volunteer in touch with staff, visitors of all ages, and other volunteers of similar interests.

A variety of positions are available. The Visitor Guide program needs volunteers with a background in science to explain exhibits to youngsters. Project Eye-opener depends on volunteers to introduce second graders from the inner-city to a museum experience. The Arthur D. Little Discovery Room relies on volunteers to orient young children amid a wealth of exploratory materials in nature and physical science. There are assignments to be found in the bustle of the museum shop, and volunteers with clerical and technical skills are also in demand.

Workshops

Four healthbound workshops, part of "Life Style," Lawrence General Hospital's wellness program, are scheduled to begin in mid-September at the hospital.

Relaxation training will be given Mondays and Wednesdays from 7-9 p.m. Sept. 14 through Oct. 26.

Weight loss is available from 9-9:30 a.m. or 6:30-7 p.m. Tuesdays from Sept. 15 to Nov. 17.

Anyone wishing to stop smoking can enroll in the four-session Smokers' Liberation which will meet from 7-9 p.m. Sept. 17, 22, 24, and 29.

New Campus Ministry Director Named At College

Rev. Owen R. Jackson, O.S.A.

Rev. Owen R. Jackson, O.S.A., former director of campus ministry at Villanova University, has been named director of campus ministry at Merrimack College. It was announced by Merrimack President Rev. John E. Deegan, O.S.A.

Fr. Jackson is replacing Rev. George Morgan, O.S.A., who is leaving for a year of liturgical study at Mundelein University in Chicago, and has served as Merrimack's director of campus ministry since 1979.

Ordained to the priesthood in 1965, Fr. Jackson's major responsibility will be the coordination of religious and spiritual affairs on the North Andover campus.

He has been pastor of St. Rita's parish in Philadelphia, Pa., for the last two years. From 1972-79 he was a member of Villanova University's campus ministry staff, serving as director from 1976-79. While there he established a program of studies in peace and social justice which serves as a model for other colleges developing similar programs. Currently, he is a consultant for the National Association of Catholic Colleges and Universities for Justice and Peace Education.

Fr. Jackson taught physics at Monsignor Bonner High School in Drexel, Pa., from 1966-68 and Austin Preparatory School in Reading from 1965-66.

A native of the Bronx, N.Y., he served a four-year term in the Marine Corps during the Korean War, earning the rank of sergeant.

Fr. Jackson graduated Villanova University with a bachelor of arts degree and holds a master's in religious studies from Augustinian College, Washington, D.C.

Cambodian Family Arrives

The Chhum family, refugees from Cambodia, arrived in the Andover community on Aug. 25, only nine days after the Faith Lutheran congregation voted to provide a refugee family resettlement support and to find housing and employment for the family.

The father, Sarom, mother, Choem, three year old son, Camrang, ten month old son, Samrack, and Choem's 14 year old brother, Bunthy Chak, are all doing well and experiencing the adjustments expected when coming into a new country culture and language.

An authentic Hawaiian luau is being held at Faith Lutheran's South Main Street location Saturday, Sept. 12 at 6 p.m. to help raise the needed funds for support during the resettlement period. Mai Tais, Maui chicken, roast Kalua pig, broiled Mahi Mahi and all the other traditional Hawaiian foods will be flown direct from Hawaii by United Airlines. The Nancy Chippendale hula dancers will perform.

Reservations can be obtained at McGoff Realtors, Cole Hardware, Thompson's Stationers, or by calling Mrs. Ernest Edge, Timothy Drive, or Mrs. Rolf Oscarssen, Gemini Circle.

Attends National Conference

Laura Viehamann, 35 Lucerne Drive, was recently a delegate to the National Ecumenical Student Conference held in Berkeley, Calif. She represented West Parish Church, who paid expenses, and Brown University, where she is currently a second semester junior. Viehamann was selected as a delegate because of her experience with the New England University Christian Movement and her social activist work, as well as her long standing commitment to the church.

The purpose of the conference was to initiate the establishment of a new national student Christian movement. The previous U.S. Student Christian Movement dissolved in the late 1960s. The formation of a new movement is supported by the World Student Christian Federation, an organization founded in 1895 with over 100 member nations. The U.S. is currently the only member nation without a national, ecumenical student movement. A national movement in the U.S. would be committed to ecumenical participation in local, national and global mission in witness to the Gospel of Jesus Christ. This commitment affirms the power of the gospel to transform society, bringing justice and freedom to all peoples. To continue the formation process the more than 200 delegates established a National Interim Committee and mandated tasks for the committee. The 14-member committee is composed of students representing Asian, black, Hispanic, native and white Americans, men and women, and the interests of disabled persons. A group representing campus ministers, church agencies and student movement staff serves as advisors. The Interim Committee will initiate and direct planning for a future national assembly to be held in two years. Students, ministers, churches and student movements around the globe hope for the formation of the U.S. Student Christian Movement at this assembly.

To Honor Rabbi At Temple

Plans are under way to honor Rabbi Everett Gendler later this month on the 10th anniversary of his religious leadership at Temple Emanuel of Merrimack Valley, Lowell. Chairman of the event, David Breakstone of Watertown, and committee member, Ralph Prolman of Methuen, have announced that a gala to include an evening of superb music, epicurean food and nostalgic reminiscences will take place. An appreciation for Rabbi Gendler's presence among the congregation will be the theme of the occasion.

Rabbi Gendler, a native of Sheraton, Iowa, was educated at the University of Chicago and the Jewish Theological Seminary in New York. He previously served congregations in Princeton, N.J., and Rio de Janeiro. A representative of the Reform Temple of the Merrimack Valley, he is also a member of various international, religious and social service organizations and contributes to the Committee on Ritual of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations. In addition, he is informal advisor to Jewish communities in Somerville and Marblehead.

Rabbi Gendler is one of three religious chaplains at Phillips Academy and teaches courses there in both religion and philosophy.

Confirmation Program Registration

Registration for the St. Augustine's religious education program to prepare for the Sacrament of Confirmation will be held Wednesday, Sept. 9, at 7:30 in the upper church. Father Robert Connors of the Archdiocesan Religious Education Office will speak on the meaning of the Sacrament. Registration and class placement will follow. Candidates must be accompanied by at least one parent at the registration meeting.

Those in grade 9 or above are eligible to begin this two-year program. Candidates prepare by attending classes, liturgies, days of recollection and by performing service in the community.

Volunteers Needed

Bon Secours Hospital's Department of Volunteer Services is now accepting applications from anyone over the age of 18 for its adult volunteer program.

According to Kate Barker, director of Volunteer Services, hospital volunteers are asked to work at least four hours weekly and are assigned various duties in a wide-range of hospital departments including food service, transportation and communication services.

Orientation for new volunteers will be held Monday, Sept. 21, at 8 a.m. in the hospital's classroom. Residents of Andover who would like to volunteer should contact Ms. Barker at the hospital for more information on the application process.

Church Fair

Free Church will hold its annual fair Saturday, Nov. 7, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

All popular tables will be featured as well as a snack bar and tea on the church grounds at 31 Elm St.

Miss Ella Petrie is serving as advisor.

paneling, plaster walls trimmed with gold leaf, damask inlay wall panels and a Roman barrel vault ceiling executed with profuse classical detail. The Music Hall was recently listed in the National Register of Historic Places.

Although the intricately carved American black walnut organ case and the oak paneling of the hall were recently refinished, much work remains to be done to the interior to restore the decoration to its original splendor. It is hoped that the receipts from this concert will help the Music Hall Board of Trustees contract for extensive and much-needed restoration.

Andover Landmark Home Falls To The Wrecker

Townpeople with an appreciation for history and fine old architecture are mourning the destruction of one of Andover's landmark homes. Phillips Academy's Cheever House, which until last Thursday stood at the corner of School and South Main streets.

The 200-year-old white house was razed last Thursday and Friday because it wasn't fit to be occupied and would have cost too much to renovate. PA Business Manager George Neilson explained to the selectmen Monday night.

Neilson unexpectedly rose from the audience to defend the destruction of the building during the selectmen's meeting, after Selectmen Chairman Norma Gammon remarked that she "hated to see such a big, beautiful house right on Main Street go down. It's too bad the Historical Commission didn't know."

The business manager — who was on hand to hear discussion of another item on the selectmen's agenda, revaluation — said the Academy first realized the house was unsound in 1963, and had been "trying to preserve it" since the early '70s. The house has been "patched up" twice during the past 10 years, Neilson said.

A contractor's recent inspection showed that the old house had major structural defects, he explained. "The ceiling rafters were actually being held up by the roof boards, rather than the other way around."

The academy decided to demolish the house after determining that it would have cost "50 percent more to rehabilitate the building than to raze it and rebuild it," Neilson said. "That just didn't make sense."

Although it has stood vacant in recent years, the old home once housed both students and faculty members. The academy has no plans to rebuild on the site, Neilson said.

"We will cover over the hole," he told the board, "and there will be a pretty green space at the corner of School and Main."

Building Project Right On Schedule

Renovation of Andover's three secondary schools is proceeding right on schedule and with "no major problems," the school building committee learned last Thursday, according to committee Chairman Kenneth Gropper.

Meola Construction Company is actually ahead of its schedule for rebuilding the playing fields at Doherty School, West Junior High and Andover High School, the chairman reported, and is ready to loom and seed the fields.

Meanwhile Peabody Construction Company has already stripped "70 to 80 percent" of the interior of Doherty, which is being converted into a junior high school, and has started work on East Junior High's Memorial Auditorium, which will be part of the new junior high school.

Work is also progressing on the new J. Everett Collins high school auditorium, designed to seat 1,250, and on the Instructional Materials Center (I.M.C. or library) to be built at West Junior High. Gropper said a large crane was used to lift bulldozers into the courtyard at West where the new I.M.C. will be built.

The three-part project is scheduled for completion by September 1983.

Gropper's committee is putting its finishing touches on the equipment budget for the $13.72 million project, the last part of the program to be budgeted. The equipment budget will be used to furnish the renovated buildings and their new wings including such items as desks, lockers and auditorium seats.

The building committee hopes to complete the equipment budget around Sept. 15, the chairman said, and will present it to a joint meeting of the school and school building committees for their approval.

The next school building committee meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 10, in the town hall conference room.

Preliminary plans for an 18-home cluster development off Ballardvale Road were quietly approved by the Planning Board Tuesday night, along with a special permit to cluster.

Abutters who expressed concerns about the proposed development during a public hearing three weeks ago were not present as the planners discussed the approval for nearly two hours.

The subdivision, proposed by Wyncrest Development Corp. of Andover, will be located on a 22.3-acre parcel between Sunset Rock Road and Enfield Drive, part of a 100-acre lot sold by the Henry Jenkins family. The rest of the land will remain with the Jenkinses.

The development will consist of homes selling for "under $200,000," developer Douglas Wacome has said. The homes will be built on lots larger than the zoning requires, clustered around a cul-de-sac.

The subdivision will also include 6.7 acres of open space, most of it wetlands, to be deeded to the Conservation Commission, according to Bill MacLeod of Andover Consultants. Wyncrest's engineer

MacLeod said the developer will return to the planners with definitive plans within two months.

The planners unanimously approved the plans, placing 12 conditions on their approval. (Chairman David Gravalles was absent.)

One major concern was that the new development not aggravate existing drainage problems on Enfield Drive — a fear raised by abutters during the public hearing.

Public Works Director Robert McQuade said he could not offer a definite answer until he has inspected the parcel with

Town Engineer John Avery, but he does not believe the new homes would "complicate existing problems."

Planner Marge Bradshaw asked why Public Works wanted to extend the water line in the area to form a loop; some residents said that work would destroy too many trees.

A looped water system would provide better fire protection in the area because water could be supplied from two directions, McQuade explained, and would help keep most of the line in service when there are breaks in one section of the water main.

It would also eliminate a "dead-end" main, which could result in rusty water in the future, he added. "There are good, sound engineering reasons" for the loop, he concluded.

McQuade said Public Works would supervise installation of the new water main to ensure "the least disruption of the topography. We will try to save the large trees."

Another of the abutters' concerns was brought up by Planner Jerry Greer, who asked if the developer plans to return a stone boundary wall to its original appearance when construction is complete.

Wyncrest will preserve the wall, MacLeod answered, because it would "be to

New Development Director Sees Andover's Growth Continuing

By Sue Aucella Deacon

Jonathan Gilmore expects Andover to keep on growing for at least five more years. And he's looking forward to the challenge of playing a part in that continuing growth, the newly-appointed director of Community Development and Planning said this week.

Gilmore, his appointment by acting Town Manager Tony Torrisi confirmed by the selectmen Monday night, will move into his new office in the Essex Street theatre building Sept. 14.

As the successor to Rhys Kear, first director of the department created two years ago, he will be in charge of or responsible to eight departments, boards, commissions and committees involved in planning Andover's future growth.

"Andover is probably one of two towns in the Merrimack Valley that have a potential for continued growth — commercial, residential and industrial," Gilmore said Monday during a telephone interview from his office with the New Resource Group of Milford, N.H.

"Things are really happening, and for the next five to seven years, it looks like that situation is probably not going to change very much."

At a stage in his career when he is eager for "additional challenges," the idea of "needing to work at my peak efficiency" to keep up with Andover's changes appealed to him, Gilmore said.

He seems confident that he will be able to avoid the problems that befell Kear, who was asked to resign last spring, by "appreciating the need to work within the structure." Gilmore defined that structure as "everyone you have to work with" — including the selectmen and town manager, as well as the members of his own department.

He believes there is a "duality" to the director's position that he fully understands: a balance between having "a vision of the way you want the town to grow," and handling the "day-to-day business of facilitating the operation of the department, which is equally important." That duality, he emphasized, "has to be appreciated."

The new director sounded more like a team player than a would-be star, describing

ing the department as "an extended family" in which "everyone needs to get along with one another."

He hopes his position will be "an integral part of the town administration," Gilmore added, but his personal goals seem modest: "I want to be of help — I have a strong sense of duty to my employer. And I have a strong need to make a contribution."

Although he will be faced with "a number of challenges" as director, Gilmore said he expects the task of revising the town's comprehensive plan to claim much of his attention. Updating the plan will involve coming up with "a definition of the future," he explained, "and that is certainly a challenge."

Learning to work with and serve the needs of the Planning Board, part of the Community Development Department, will be another challenge, he added. But it is too soon to say what his goals for the department or the town will be, Gilmore said, until he learns more about both.

Gilmore has worked for the non-profit New Resource Group for the past month teaching municipalities throughout New England about the advantages of retrofit systems for water conservation. The systems can help cities and towns save water and money, he said. Stoughton, Mass., for example, has realized "substantial savings" by using a retrofit system. He described his current position as one that combines "marketing and education."

Before joining the New Hampshire organization, Gilmore worked for eight years for the Southern Rockingham Planning Commission of Salem, N.H. Gilmore has also worked as an assistant planner with the Cambridge Planning and Development department.

Born in Boston and raised in New Haven, Conn., Gilmore is a graduate of Antioch College and the University of Pennsylvania, where he received a master's degree in city planning in 1970.

Gilmore likes to relax by jogging, reading, playing an "occasional game of golf or tennis," and spending as much time as possible with his wife, Kaija, and their ten-year-old daughter, Nina. A citizen of Finland, Kaija Gilmore is an architect employed by the Manchester, N.H. firm of Isaac and Isaac.

The family lives in Windham, N.H., but as a requirement of Gilmore's new job, they will move to Andover as soon as possible, he said.

Last weekend, the Gilmores drove around town to survey their future home, Gilmore said, and they were pleased with what they saw. "We were very impressed," he explained, "and, frankly, surprised. It reminds me a lot of New Haven — I think because the relationship of Yale to New Haven is somewhat similar to the relationship of Phillips Academy to Andover."

Andover has beautiful homes, fantastic public facilities, and it's a community where there's a whole lot of things going on," the town's newest official said with enthusiasm.

There are a lot of difficulties, too," he added, "but it's the kind of community that I can't imagine anybody not wanting to live in."

Three Mile Trek For Buildings

Three historic old farm buildings will be moved along a three-mile route from their present site on River Road to a new location on High Plain Road, with the selectmen's unanimous approval, four or five weeks from now.

The selectmen Monday night reviewed Patricia and Terrence Sullivan's plans to move the three Shattuck Farm buildings from the West Andover Industrial Tech Park, where they now sit on Digital Equipment Corp. land, to a 12-acre lot owned by the Sullivans.

The Sullivans plan to renovate the farm buildings into homes for their children. Their site, bounded by Route 495, Route 93, conservation land and their own property on High Plain Road, is a triangular-shaped parcel similar to the original farm site.

The entire move will be paid for by the Sullivans, as part of their deal to buy the buildings from Arkwright-Boston Insurance, developer of the industrial park.

Mover John Lestor of Nashua, N.H., will tow the Shattuck buildings through the Valle's parking lot across the street from their current location, up River Road to Forest Hill Drive, along Cross Road, and

The Condominium Question

Andover officials continue to ponder the advisability of appealing the ruling of the attorney general who has rejected the town's enactment of a bylaw regulating conversion of apartments to condominiums.

A meeting of planners, selectmen, zoning board and counsel last week failed to come up with any conclusions as to whether to proceed towards a court determination on the matter, or accept the attorney general's ruling which rejected the decision of this year's town meeting to regulate such conversion.

There was a rather succinct question posed during the discussion, namely, does Andover want condominiums at all?

The question is interesting from the standpoint of whether such a decision lies within the province of the community to decide.

At this point, based on past actions, Andover has stated unequivocally that it does not favor such multiple housing opportunities for present or future residents, despite the fact that there are now some units available in the community.

In the past year town meeting has twice struck down zoning regulations creating condominium districts.

The first time, last December, the matter was defeated based primarily on the fact that insufficient time had been allotted to study the overall matter of condo regulations and the impact such construction would have on the town.

At the time, there was a single location proposed for condo development --- Andover Street and Argilla Road.

At that special town meeting voters were told that due to the time element and the need for further study, the consideration of condominium regulations would be brought back to the annual town meeting in the spring. The matter would be given ample study and the districts established where such development could take place.

But, when the voters convened for the annual session, the matter was again rejected, and not by any close vote.

At that same session, the voters approved a bylaw which would prohibit eviction of tenants from apartments scheduled for conversion to condominiums for an ample period of time. This was supported strongly by residents of the Washington Park apartment complex, who, at the time, were under threat of such conversion action. Since the town meeting the complex has been sold and the new owners have moved toward condo conversion.

Based on these three actions, it appears evident Andover is not interested in condominium development.

But the more important question would seem to be how long can Andover continue to prevent such development?

Frankly, it is to be hoped that the planners didn't scrap the proposed condo regulations following town meeting rejection in May. The time may not be too far off when such bylaws will be necessary.

Builders and contractors have a way of pursuing such matters to a successful conquering of a community's wishes, either through legislative or court action.

First and foremost, there exist some condominiums already, with the Garden Apartments on Haverhill Street which were converted a year ago, the most notable.

There are other multi-family units in the community where the condominium theory is in vogue.

Washington Park is proceeding as planned with its conversion, with some of those who had supported an appeal of the attorney general's ruling now feeling otherwise and asking the selectmen to withdraw the court action.

Another factor to be considered is that for a community to exist it must be able to accommodate young people. Young couples starting out today will find it most difficult to meet some of the costs of single residence property in Andover, thus will turn to the alternative which condominium construction offers in many cases. Such developments also offer an alternative for senior citizens who no longer need large and sometimes cumbersome property holdings in their retirement years.

Under such circumstances, it would seem advisable to have the planners ready to reintroduce the condominium legislation to the next town meeting.

Frankly, it seems to make more sense to have such regulation on the books and be prepared to meet the problem when, and if it is presented again, than to have some outside agency telling the town what it can or can not do, as can happen.

As for the appeal process on the bylaw adopted in May, the sensible approach would be to weigh the court costs against the realistic chances of winning the case, based on the town meeting adoption of the regulations by a substantial vote.

Down The Years With The Townsman

75 Years Ago — September 1906

Two valuable cows owned by Superintendent of Streets, Joseph T. Lovejoy, have died this week from poisoning. It is not definitely known whether they were poisoned accidentally or intentionally.

At the regular meeting of the selectmen held on Monday, the tax rate for 1906 was fixed at $17.50 per $1000. This is an advance of $1.50 over last year, when the rate was $16 per $1000. For the past five years the rate has been the same, having changed in 1900, when it was $15.50 per $1000.

During one of the worst thunder showers that has visited Andover this summer the barn of F. Homer Foster, on Central Street, was struck by a bolt of lightning about half past seven last Saturday evening. That no damage was done seems almost miraculous, but as it was not even a shingle was disturbed. A huge ball of fire was seen descending from the clouds, which landed on the cupola and fell onto the roof of the barn. From there it rolled off onto the grass.

The Townsman baseball team won the annual game from their rivals, the Lawrence Telegram team, on the Playstead Monday afternoon by the score of 13 to 12 in an exciting and interesting game. Some of the players on both teams were old-timers and they showed excellent form at both the bat and in the field.

50 Years Ago — September 1931

Over two hundred families have moved out of Andover completely for the summer and 181 individuals are away on vacation this week, it was stated by officials at the Andover Post Office, who keep a record of people going away in order that they may forward mail to them. Andover people may be found from Maine to California, from Canada to Mexico, in Europe, on the high seas, and travelling around the world, the records indicate. Few, if any, will be back in Andover before September first.

The new five-mile highway extending across county from Reading road, above the Andover line, near Wilson's Corner, North Andover, is practically completed and, according to State Engineer L.J. Fritz, will soon be thrown open to public travel. It is anticipated that the new highway will divert considerable traffic which now passes through the campus of Phillips Academy and the town square.

Andover's share of the state tax this year is approximately $1500 greater than in 1930, according to the warrant just received by the Board of Assessors from State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley. And-over's share of the 1931 tax is $21,900, as compared to $20,440 last year.

The clanging for more than 20 minutes of the vault alarm outside the Andover National Bank shortly after 1 o'clock Tuesday morning was due to no attempt of burglars to break into the vaults, but to some slight defect in the delicate mechanism which operates it, so bank officials said. The piercing clanging awoke several people in the neighborhood who poked their heads out to see what was the trouble.

JACK ANDERSON and JOE SPEAR

WEEKLY SPECIAL

Downing of Libyan planes was only part of the storyBy JACK ANDERSON and JOE SPEAR

WASHINGTON — The full story of the Libyan-American confrontation in the Mediterranean has yet to be told. The shooting down of two Libyan fighter planes was just the latest episode.

We have been reporting the story, which has been hidden under the top-secret stamp, since last October: Libyan fighters had been harassing U.S. reconnaissance planes, Libyan pilots had been overheard receiving orders to shoot down American planes, and some U.S. aircraft had to take evasive action to avoid being blasted out of the sky.

We also reported that Libya's radical ruler, Muammar Qaddafi, had demanded that U.S. Navy ships keep out of the Gulf of Sidra. But these were international waters, and the Navy scheduled exercises in the gulf despite Qaddafi's proscription.

This was in June 1980. Jimmy Carter was president, and his brother Billy was being courted by the Libyans. For this and other reasons, the naval exercises were moved out of the Gulf of Sidra. Qaddafi then showed his contempt for the United States by inviting the Soviet fleet to sail in the gulf.

Inside the Pentagon, the admirals were furious. They felt it was a mistake to let a petty tyrant push the U.S. Navy out of international waters. But they had to wait until Jimmy Carter was replaced by Ronald Reagan in the White House before they could reschedule the maneuvers.

Reagan was alerted that an incident was likely. But the maneuvers in the Gulf of Sidra, we are told, had the president's personal approval.

This time it was the Navy's turn to show its contempt for the Libyans. The F-14 interceptors flown by Navy pilots were equipped with Phoenix missiles, which cost about $713,000 apiece. But the fighters also carry Sidewinder missiles, which cost only $80,000 each.

The Phoenix, of course, would have been safer to use. But the American pilots didn't want to waste the expensive missiles on the Libyans. So they saved the taxpayers $1,266,000 by downing the two Libyan planes with Sidewinders.

AIRLINE PLAINT: The nation's airlines have already lost millions because of the air traffic controllers' strike. And there was nothing the airlines could do to stop it. The controllers are fighting the government, not the airline industry.

Now the airlines are complaining that the government is giving them another kick in the wallet. Here are the details:

The Reagan administration's budget-cutters have taken aim at the $3 billion the government lays out in travel expenses each year. A good chunk of that money goes to the airlines.

The Office of Management and Budget decided it would be cheaper to have government agencies buy their tickets through travel agents instead of from the airlines. Travel agents, the OMB figures, will be more likely to take advantage of the many discounts and special fares that are available. The airlines obviously have no compelling desire to let government travelers know about discount possibilities.

What bothers the airlines most about the proposed economy move is that the carriers have to pay travel agents a 10 percent commission for tickets they sell. Industry sources say this could cost the airlines an extra $4 million a year.

The airline industry has begun a letter-writing campaign in hopes of killing the travel agent idea. Industry spokesmen claim the use of travel agents will wind up costing the government more in the long run because of the commissions.

But the commissions come out of the airlines' pockets, not Uncle Sam's. One OMB official told us that the airlines' claims were "hogwash."

THREAT FROM WITHIN: President Reagan wants to sell billions of dollars' worth of military equipment — including the AWACS radar plane — to Saudi Arabia. U.S. officials claim the weapons will protect the Saudis from other nations, including Russia, who cast covetous eyes on Saudi oilfields.

Our own intelligence sources, however, say the Saudi royal family is facing a more ominous threat — from inside Saudi Arabia. The Saudi military — which will receive the U.S. arms aid — could turn against its rulers. Many officers were trained in the United States and are appalled by the corruption that is rampant in higher circles. Other military officers are Islamic fundamentalists who resent Westernization in their country.

WATCH ON WASTE: The Navy wants to add a dozen new cargo ships to its fleet to serve the Pentagon's rapid deployment force. But government auditors say millions could be saved by purchasing old ships and refurbishing them. The cost for one new cargo vessel is well over $200 million. It would cost less than half that amount to rebuild used ships, and it would take less time to get them ready for action.

President Reagan has ordered federal officials to stop wasting money on office renovations. But apparently the director of civil rights for the transportation department, Wesley Plummer, doesn't think that moving walls around in his office is the same as redecorating. He has had two walls moved around twice to create conference and reception rooms. Cost to the taxpayers: $4,000.

Brandon will assume her duties on Sept. 11.

Justins Taste Victory

The underdog Justin's team defeated defending champion Howe 4-3 to capture the 1981 Andover Department of Community Services Mens Softball Playoff championship three games to one.

Justin's really had to work hard for this one. Howe jumped to a 2-0 lead in the third on three consecutive singles and a fielder's choice. Justin's came back in their half of the fourth with two runs via an error, two singles and two costly walks.

one with the bases loaded. The score remained knotted at two until the bottom of the sixth when Mike Healy of Justin's drove one to the base of the centerfield fence and legged it for a two-run homer and a 4-2 Justin's lead. Howe threw a real scare into Justin's in the last inning when they came to within one run with runners on second and third and two outs, but Justin's pitcher, Kevin Gaudes, induced Howe's last batter to pop out to end the game.

tioning the deductibility of gypsy moth damage as a casualty loss deduction for federal tax purposes, according to Herbert B. Mosher, District Director for IRS in Massachusetts.

Mosher stated "that a casualty loss deduction as a result of gypsy moth infestation will not be allowed on your Federal Income Tax Return for 1981. The loss of trees, shrubs and other plants or property used for residential purposes as a result of disease or fungus spread by beetles, insects or worms does not qualify as a casualty loss." The gypsy moth is indigenous to the New England area and invasion has occurred in previous years. Therefore, the loss is not considered sudden, unexpected or unusual in nature.

A casualty loss was allowed under Internal Revenue Ruling 79-174 for trees destroyed by an onslaught of beetles. A massive onslaught of Southern pine beetles attacked pine trees in an area not known for such massive attacks did constitute a casualty. However, they gypsy moth infestation occurs in the New England area about every ten years.

Mosher noted that taxpayers may obtain more information about casualty losses by ordering a free IRS Publication 547, Information on Disaster, Casualty Losses and Thefts.

Harvard Welcomes Retirees

The Institute for Learning in Retirement at Harvard University is accepting applications for the fall 1981 term, which begins Sept. 12, as well as for membership in the full academic year 1981-82 program.

Membership in the Harvard Institute provides semi-retired and retired men and women with the opportunity to participate in and choose from a variety of non-credit study groups in such fields as history, literature, science, the arts, social studies, language, music and politics.

Each study group, based on cooperative leadership, member participation in determining the curriculum, and volunteer peer-teaching, meets weekly for two hours during the day and averages 12 to 15 students. Members participate in one or more study groups depending upon their schedule and interests.

For more information and to receive an application form, call the Harvard Institute for Learning in Retirement or stop by B-3

Lehman Hall (opposite the Harvard Square MBTA station), at Harvard University in Cambridge.

More than 200 members from greater Boston area communities, some from as far away as Vermont and the Cape, participate in the program and have access to Harvard libraries, athletic facilities, Harvard Extension or Center for Lifelong Learning educational programs, as well as to social activities and "study trips" to local and foreign areas of interest.

Career Course At Middlesex

"Give me a fish, and I will eat for today; teach me to fish, and I will eat for the rest of my life." This ancient proverb has become a prevalent philosophy behind current workshops for job hunters and career changers.

"Career Transitions," a unique program being offered this fall by the Division of Community Services at Middlesex Community College, is designed both to teach this practical creative process of the effective job hunt and career change, as well as to provide "on-the-job" experience to explore a new field.

The one-semester program has been designed for employed men and women who wish, or need, to consider a career change. Program developer Susan Capon believes that "the key to a successful career change lies in being able to answer three questions: Who am I? What do I want to do? Where do I want to do it?"

Topsfield Fair Set Oct. 3-12

It's the oldest continuous county fair in America and is currently ranked the No. 1 county fair in New England, but officials of the Essex Agricultural Society who sponsor Topsfield Fair aren't about to rest on their laurels.

They believe their fair survived four wars, several depressions, two hurricanes and other disasters that have befallen the nation since 1818 by unswerving commitments to creativity and innovation. The list of "firsts" at Topsfield in the fields of agriculture, horticulture, arts, crafts, education and entertainment is almost as long as the years the event has been conducted.

The 157th renewal of the fair, Oct. 3-12, will be no exception in the new-ideas department. For one thing, there'll be competitive sheepdog trials replete with sheep being herded to safety and shelter in an enclosed area. Fair General Manager Paul Corson, after 30 years on the job, knows an event that will excite both city and country folks. He says it will be the only contest of its kind in the state and probably in the northeast. The superbly trained and amazingly responsive sheep dogs will be in action Sunday, Oct. 11. They will be judged in three categories—best outrun and fetch, best run and best qualified run. They will vie for a total purse of $810.

Another livestock feature will be the expansion of the competitive draft horse show from one to two days, Oct. 11 and 12. Spectators acclaimed the 1980 event with some 60 magnificent Belgians and Percherons in varied action, including an obstacle course for Massachusetts horses only. More than 100 equines are expected to seek shares of $1,817 in prize money, plus trophies for grand champion and best horseman.

Awarded Certificate Of Merit

Nga Doam, Walnut Street, and Le Dang, High Street, both employees of Compugraphic Corporation, recently were given certificates of merit upon completion of an English language program conducted at the corporation's facilities by Language Masters of North Andover.

Driving Caution Urged Over Labor Day Weekend

43 THE TOWNSMAN SEPTEMBER 3, 1981

The Massachusetts Safety Council cautions motorists to "be street smart—drive defensively!" this Labor Day weekend, which begins at 6 p.m. Friday, Sept. 4, and ends at midnight, Monday, Sept. 7.

More than 85 percent of all motor vehicle accidents each year are the result of human error, not mechanical breakdown," according to Arthur D. Moriarty, executive vice president of the Massachusetts Safety Council. "By driving defensively, motorists can reduce the possibility of human error and highway accidents."

Last year, during the three-day holiday weekend, more than 500 people died in traffic accidents nationwide; eleven in Massachusetts.

The Massachusetts Safety Council urges drivers to practice defensive driving by being alert to the actions of other drivers, observing speed limits and using seat belts.

Moriarty has the following additional "street smart" tips for motorists who will be driving during this Labor Day weekend:

Start and stop early. Allow yourself plenty of travel time so that you won't have to rush to your destination. Avoid traveling on Friday and Sunday afternoons and evenings when traffic jams and poor driving conditions abound.

Be sure to get plenty of rest the night before your trip. Once on the road, change drivers every few hours and stop often to eat and stretch your legs.

Make sure vehicle is in good mechanical condition before you set out. Check brakes, tires, battery and the exhaust system. Always carry emergency equipment and flares in case of breakdown.

Avoid tailgating when driving. "Fender-benders" are often the result of following another car too closely. Here's a good way to keep the proper distance between your car and another vehicle. It's called the "two-second rule." When the car ahead of you passes a fixed landmark, begin counting "one thousand one, one thousand two." If you pass the same landmark before you finish counting, you're tailgating. Slow down right away.

If your holiday weekend will include parties or barbecues where alcohol will be served, remember the "1 for 1" rule. Limit yourself to one drink an hour or wait one hour for each drink you've had before getting behind the wheel of a car.

Labor Day is a traditional time to travel. Many people try to get away for one last vacation before the fall season begins.

Don't let a driving mishap mar your holiday.

Beaked Whales

Beaked whales, 18 species, live in the ocean depths and are known almost entirely from skeletons of stranded specimens. The skull has a long beak; the body is tapered and has wide tail flukes and small flippers. Baird's beaked whale is the largest, 42 feet long; it lives in the Pacific and submerges at least to 7,900 feet, according to Massachusetts Audubon.

The first woman doctor was Elizabeth Blackwell.

Nursing Program

The importance of continuing education for nursing professionals seeking relicensure will be the topic covered at Bon Secours Hospital's forthcoming program titled "C.E.U. and You" planned for September.

According to Mrs. Constance Fitzpatrick, R.N., Bon Secours Hospital's coordinator of staff development, the program is designed to explain the difference between continuing education units and contact hours while identifying the available mechanisms for receiving contact hours for relicensure. She added that registered nurses only have until Dec. 31 to complete mandatory education requirements that are necessary in order to remain in active status during 1982.

Registered and licensed practical nurses throughout the Merrimack Valley are encouraged to attend this program on either Friday, Sept. 18, from 12 noon to 1:30 p.m., or Tuesday, Sept. 22, from 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. in the hospital's auditorium.

To register, contact the Bon Secours Hospital Department of Education by Sept. 11. There is a registration fee payable at the door and refreshments are included.

The state has approved new plans for South School. At a meeting Tuesday morning with the School Building Assistance commission, members of the school committee received verbal approval of the building. Board member Albert Cole, Jr. said few questions were asked about the plan — for "they thought it was a good job — they liked it."

The Nelson twins celebrated their ninety-ninth birthday Tuesday. There wasn't much fuss over the anniversary, for the still-sprightly pair have outlived most of their relatives and those left are mostly "down Maine." Mrs. Carrie Alberta Nelson Lovejoy and her brother, Charles H. Nelson, seem pretty well satisfied to just keep perking along. Born a year after the Civil War ended, both came to Massachusetts in their early years — and have lived in this state ever since. However, they're comparative newcomers to Andover, having lived here for only 25 years.

10 Years Ago — September 1971

New England Telephone and Telegraph crews are installing equipment in the Andover central office to expand long distance calling facilities for area customers. Local telephone manager Charles A. Papalia said the $63,000 project will provide additional conversational pathways between Andover and the communities of Salem and Haverhill.

The Massachusetts Department of Education has established a new rule for the entrance age of school children but it is the same as has existed in Andover for a number of years. While other cities and towns have different regulations, Andover has accepted children into the school system when they became age six of that year. As a result, the new law will not bring any changes in this town.

A Dartmouth College sophomore from Andover has been cited by a professor of classics for outstanding academic achievement during the past term. John W. Danforth was commended by Assistant Professor of Classics J.C. Douglas Marshall, who said, "For a student at his level, Mr. Danforth has displayed an exceptional grasp of the Latin language."

LGH To Present Community Programs

Lawrence General Hospital (LGH) will present a three part Community Outreach Series this fall at the Stevens Memorial Library in North Andover, focusing on topics that touch many of our lives.

The format for all will be a discussion between the speakers and those attending.

Programs will begin at 7:30 p.m. and are open to the public free of charge.

The first discussion, September 23, will be on "Parenting". It is coordinated by Cathy Lane, R.N., of Westford, who has led the prepared childbirth education classes at LGH for three years, and previously worked in the nursery for 10 years.

Her children are Becky, age nine, and Bruce, age 13. She will be assisted in the presentation by Beverly Valle, R.N., of North Andover, mother of two children, and Celeste Mahoney, R.N., of Methuen, also mother of two.

Both women have also had experience as prepared childbirth educators and as LGH nursery nurses.

"You and Your Aging Parent" will be presented on October 21 led by Donna Reid, R.N., of Tewksbury, LGH gerontological specialist, and Steve Burke, A.S.C.W., of Methuen, LGH director of social services.

On November 18, "Working Mothers" will be the topic. Participating will be Martha C. Wood of Lexington, LGH director of public relations; Wendy Jewett, R.N., of Lawrence, head nurse in the emergency department; Pat Sheehan of Andover, director of education; and Betsy Conte of Haverhill, a tax consultant and auditor. Each will address problems of various aged children, ranging from preschoolers to teenager young adult.

Promoted To Administrator

Andre Belanger, who has been chief technician of the department of radiology at Lawrence General Hospital (LGH) for the past twenty-one years, has been promoted to the new position of administrative manager of the department. He is a native and current resident of Lowell.

He is past president of the New England Conference of Radiologic Technologists and has been active in the American Society of Radiologic Technologists in various capacities. He was a founder and past president and is a life member of the New Hampshire Society of Radiologic Technologist. In addition, he is a member of the American Registry of Radiologic Technologists, the American Hospital Association of Radiologic Technologists, the Massachusetts Society of Radiologic Technologists.

He was instrumental in making the LGH radiologic training program a degree granting program currently affiliated with Northern Essex Community College.

Before coming to LGH in June, 1966, Belanger had held a similar position for 11 years at Huggins Hospital, Wolfeboro, N.H. He has also worked for Knox County Hospital, Rockland, Maine, Central Maine Medical Center, Lewiston, Maine, and Exeter Hospital, Exeter, N.H.

Belanger started his radiologic training at LGH in September.

Northern Essex Offers Program In Medical Record Technology

There are many job openings in the medical record field right now, according to an official who heads up the Medical Record Technology program at Northern Essex Community College.

"There are plenty of jobs available right now in the area," states Patricia Taglianetti, coordinator of the medical record program at the college.

She added that the jobs are available in a variety of settings, including general and rehabilitation hospitals, clinics, medical insurance offices, doctors' group practices, and health centers.

Northern Essex offers a two-year associate degree program in Medical Record Technology which prepares students to take the national accreditation examination given twice a year. Medical record technicians are responsible for the maintenance and control of all medical records in a hospital or other clinical setting. They also assist the medical staff by preparing special studies and tabulating data from records for research.

Professor Taglianetti has considerable experience in the medical record field. A graduate of Simmons College, she served as assistant director of medical records at Massachusetts General Hospital for two years. She was coordinator of a medical record technology program offered jointly by Rindge Technical Institute and the Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston from 1967 to 1969. She joined the faculty of Northern Essex Community College in 1970 and became coordinator of the medical record technology program in 1976.

Taglianetti is the former secretary of the Massachusetts Medical Record Association and last spring coordinated a workshop on regulations vs. planning in the health field at the college in cooperation with the Merrimack Valley Health Council.

Oil Remains

For each barrel of oil produced from Georges Bank, one barrel of waste water will be generated and released from the derricks. After this water has been cleaned, 30 parts per million of oil still remain in it. Oil can be toxic to some organisms at 10 parts per billion, Mass. Audubon says.

Tracking System Installed

Massachusetts Commerce Commissioner Ernest A. Lucci recently announced that call one, the Commerce Department's toll free number for businesses to call when they have a state government-related problem, has installed an automated case-tracking system.

"This will enable the Call One staff to handle more calls and to process them even faster than before," Lucci said. "Call One has become the reliable state government contact for businesses."

Lucci also took the opportunity to note that the program, which began as an experiment in western Massachusetts, now handles an average of 1,000 calls a month.

By calling one number: 1-800-632-8181, businesses can get information and assistance rather than red-tape and frustration from state government. Trained staff people receive inquiries and document the caller's problem. The majority of questions can be answered directly, but when there isn't an immediate answer, the problem is researched and an answer is given as quickly as possible. If a question can't be answered within five business days, the call is returned and the question is tracked until an answer is found.

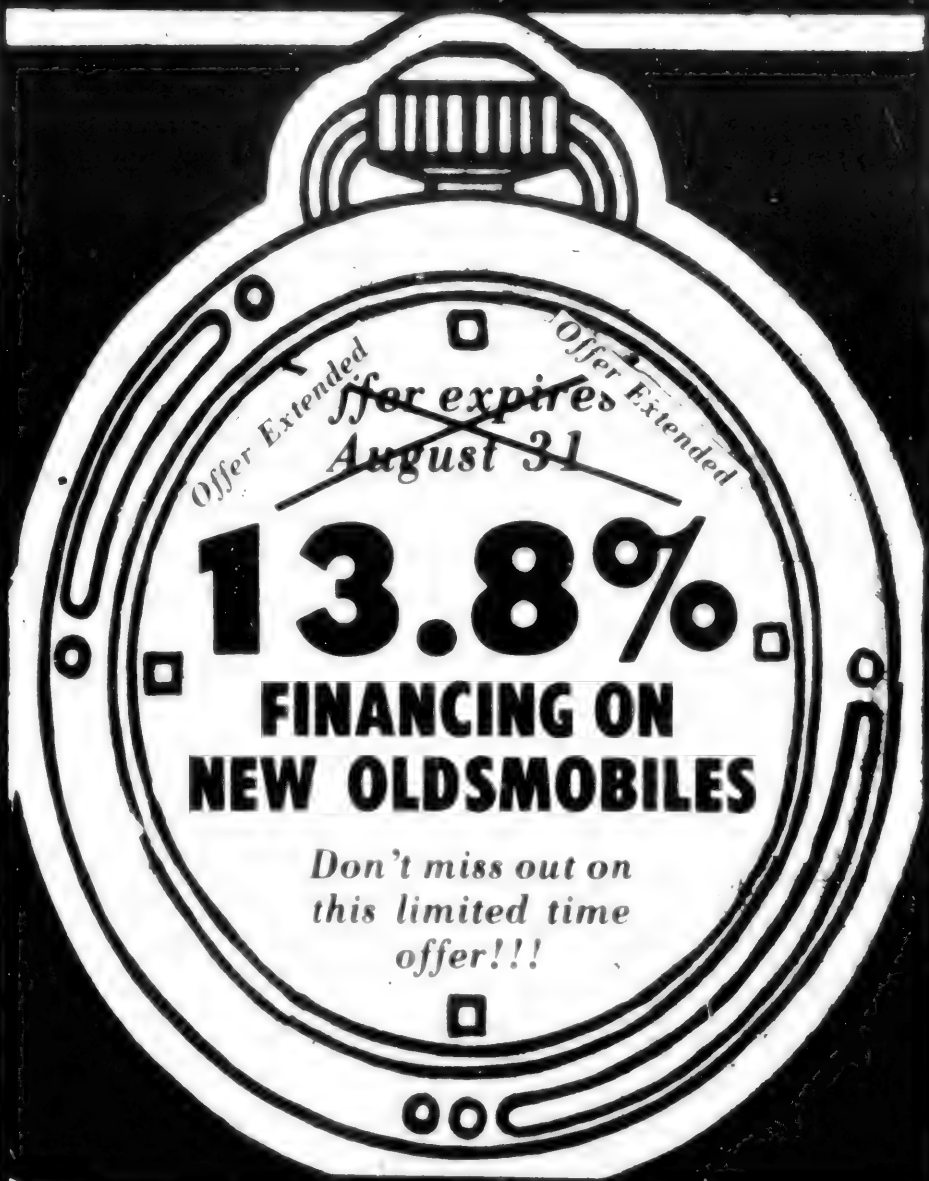

"The demand for service proves that businesses need hands-on assistance from state government every day," said Lucci. "The Call One staff has shown thousands of business people that state government cares about the business community and is committed to its success."

Some of the topics Call One staffers can handle are: industrial revenue bonds, financial assistance programs, business expansions, how to start a business importing/exporting, state regulations (e.g. purchasing/bid, franchising, blue laws), medicaid - vendor payments, tax forms, community data sheets, rate setting, employment security.

Oktoberfest This Weekend

The Lawrence Exchange Club is well along in its planning for the ninth annual Oktoberfest slated for the Labor Day Weekend.

Under the direction of Alan McLennan, chairman of the event, club members have been meeting for more than three months in preparation for the three-day celebration.

As has been true in past years, the setting for the Oktoberfest will be a huge tent erected in Lawrence's Municipal Parking Lot next to the Central Bridge. Other traditional elements include Oktoberfest beer and wine, German food, raffles, and continuous music provided by band. Souvenir booths will be run by the Exchangers, wives of Exchange Club members.

The Oktoberfest will be formally opened at 6 p.m. on Friday, September 4, when the first keg of beer is tapped. It will continue until midnight on that evening, and will continue on Saturday and Sunday, September 5 and 6, from 2 p.m. until midnight. Price of admission to the Oktoberfest is charged and the ticket holder is automatically eligible to win the door prize - 600 tickets to the Big Game, the weekly drawing of the Massachusetts lottery.

The Oktoberfest theme is a take-off on the German celebration, a national institution since 1810 staged annually for 16 days in mid-September. The Lawrence Exchange Club has made the Oktoberfest its main project, and, over the past five years, thousand of awards in proceeds from the event has been turned back to the community by the service club.

The Cerebral Palsy Clinic in Lawrence has been the major recipient of financial support, but substantial monies have also been donated to such worthy programs as the Boy's Club, Boy Scouts, Big Brother-/Big Sister Organizations, and the Club's own Hart Scholarship Fund.

Tickets for the Oktoberfest may be purchased from any Exchange Club member, or Jackson Lumber Co., Macartney's, Pick-a-Pair Shoe Store or Central Coffee Shoppe. For further information, contact Oktoberfest chairman, Alan McLennan, or Publicity Chairman Robert Goldberg.

Revaluation

residential landowners. ("Four out of five selectmen were up there," Selectmen Chairman Norma Gammon noted.) Jacobs had conducted about 1,450 hearings as of Monday, the project director said, and would continue hearings though next week.

Yesterday was the last day for making an appointment for a hearing with Jacobs. The original deadline of last Thursday was extended under protest from property-owners and town officials, Tworek explained.

The hearings are not meant to be "an adversary relationship," but "a positive process," he said. Property-owners whose assessments are revised — up or down — will receive notices in mid-October, Tworek indicated.

He emphasized that taxpayers who are still unhappy with their assessments after they appeal them to Jacobs can next appeal them to the Board of Assessors, after they receive their tax bills.

The revaluation firm relied on the real estate market to determine the new values, Tworek explained, "what the buyers and sellers have been conducting in the marketplace for the last three years, allowing for inflation." The most recent price that a house could sell for is the assessment that appears on the valuation notices, he said.

Tworek later added that the assessors and state officials will "monitor sales closely" in town during the next few months, and change Jacobs' assessments "if necessary" to match actual market values.

Gammon opened the floor to questions, warning the audience not to ask specific questions about their assessments, but general questions only. (Some residents, however, could not resist bringing up their own cases.)

Mary K. Hervol of Salem Street asked Tworek how the firm had determined neighborhood values. He explained that the mean average sale price in a neighborhood was used, with neighborhoods defined by "geographic boundaries."

The town was divided into "four major sections," he said: the "original core area," developed before World War II; Ballardvale; the Foster's Pond area; and "the balance of the town," developed after World War II.

James Whyte of Farrwood Drive said that "one big sale" of a house sold at more than its true worth could drive up the value of the entire neighborhood unfairly.

But Tworek told him that "one sale does not make the market." An unusually high sale would be noted and "wouldn't enter into" the valuation of the neighborhood, he said.

Another resident questioned the qualifications of the Jacobs "data collectors" who inspected homes.

All field workers received 40 hours of classroom training and 40 hours of in-field training, Tworek said, and they gathered only "objective data." Subjective decisions were made by other Jacobs staffers, who have "a minimum of three years' experience," he explained.

Donald Kearns of Pleasant Street questioned the "legal status" of the revaluation, and asked what "recourse" the town would have if it considered the valuation too low or too high.

"I think it's going to have a very legal status," Assessor William Russell told Kearns. He explained that the state had already examined and approved Jacobs' methods and findings, and "for the most part (the state is) pretty well satisfied."

There are exceptions, he added, "but that's what the hearing process is for." The state is expected to give final certification to Jacobs' figures after the current appeals period ends.

Several residents asked when the revaluation figures would be made public, along with information on how Jacobs had evaluated houses and property. Russell said that information could be published once it was certified by the state, and Jacobs has turned all its information on the procedures they used to the town, probably toward the end of the year.

Selectman Poore added that she would like to see street values published as well as individual valuations, to help homeowners better prepare themselves for appeals to the assessors.

Earl Thornton of Jenkins Road asked when the town might be assessed again, "and if so, why?"

The assessor explained that Andover has to maintain 100 percent valuation ("as close as we can") as mandated by the state, and will assess the town again when it seems necessary — "perhaps in two years."

"We will be monitoring values and sales more closely than we have in the past," Russell added. "We'll have to, to maintain 100 percent."

Selectman Byrne reminded the townspeople that the tax rate is not determined by assessments, but by the budget approved by annual town meeting. "You have always controlled your tax rate in this town," he said.

"Come to the annual town meeting and vote on the budget," Selectman Edward Harris urged the residents as the meeting closed. "That determines the budget."

Dr. Muto Hospital Lecturer

On Sept. 15, Dr. Rudolph Muto, an Andover resident with offices in Lawrence, will be the first speaker in a fall lecture series entitled "Your Health: It's in Your Hands," which is presented by the medical staff of Lawrence General Hospital.

The lecture, open to the public free of charge, will be held in the Kurth Auditorium of Lawrence General Hospital at 7:30 p.m.

"Lung cancer is one cancer which can be prevented—by stopping smoking," Dr. Muto points out. He stresses the need for people to be informed about lung cancer, one form of cancer currently on the increase especially among women.

Dr. Muto, a thoracic surgeon, will discuss lung cancer and smoking. He will also touch on emphysema and other respiratory diseases related to smoking.

A 1952 graduate of the University of Bologna, Dr. Muto was chief resident in surgery at the Mount Auburn Hospital in Cambridge from 1957-1958, and associate at Overholt Thoracic Clinic from 1960-1962.

He is a Diplomate of the American Board of Surgery and of the American Board of Thoracic Surgery as well as Fellow of the American College of Surgeons, the American College of Chest Physicians and American Thoracic Society.

Dr. Muto is a senior thoracic surgeon at both Lawrence General and the Bon Secours Hospital in Mehuen. He is author of numerous professional articles.

ON MORTGAGE TAKEOVERS

When buying an existing home, taking over a mortgage can be practical and profitable. But be cautious. Don't take for granted that assigning the mortgage to another is automatic.

The lender has a stake in who's going to repay him. Many mortgages are written which specifically prohibit this practice without the consent of the mortgage lender. The teeth will be found in an inserted acceleration clause which makes the whole balance due and payable upon sale.

The bank can activate or waive this clause depending on the credit rating of the buyer, maintenance of the property or spread between original and current interest rates. If the interest spread is great — don't count on a takeover mortgage.

Before you advertise "low int. mort. takeover", and set yourself up for a letdown, why not have us check your mortgage and advise you.

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please phone or drop in at THE HOWE AGENCY, 4 Punchard Ave., Andover. Phone: 475-5100. We're here to help.

down High Plain Road to the Sullivans' land, Patricia Sullivan said.

That route has been inspected and approved by the town's tree warden and the Public Works director, representatives of the telephone and electric companies, and the mover, as well as the Sullivans, she added.

One town-owned elm tree will be taken down to make way for the houses, Sullivan said, along with one limb from another town tree. A few more branches will also need to be trimmed. The Sullivans plan to hire a tree crew to do that work and clean up afterward.

The elm is already "damaged", according to Public Works director Robert McQuade, and would have been removed anyway.

Other obstacles to be temporarily removed from the mover's path include several mailboxes, which the Sullivans said they would remove and then replace.

The mover has 45 years' experience, the Sullivans said, and is not at all nervous about moving the fragile old farm buildings. "He has moved many antique houses, including a large church in Portsmouth," Mrs. Sullivan explained. "He doesn't seem to be worried."

Mrs. Sullivan assured the selectmen that abutters, police and fire officials and the post office will be notified in advance of the move. "We don't want to upset anybody," she told the board.

The Sullivans will move the buildings as soon as they receive final clearance from the electric company.

The forum will address four contemporary issues and a topic related to Abraham Lincoln. The five-part series begins Sept. 24 and each week will feature distinguished guest speakers including Roger L. the developer's advantage". The stone wall would add to the appeal of the developer's new lots, he explained.

The planners also stipulated that the subdivision cul-de-sac, "Wyncrest Circle", intersect Ballardvale Road at a 90-degree angle, for traffic safety reasons.

The developer and Everett Dearborn of 175 Summer St., who owns a nine-acre lot abutting the proposed development and has a right-of-way through subdivision land, are currently discussing the Dearborn easement, MacLeod said.

Dearborn needs the easement to remove lumber from his lot. But he may agree to remove the lumber before houses are built in the subdivision, the engineer said. Later his easement could be moved so that it follows a lot line, instead of cutting through a lot as it does now.

That agreement has no bearing on the planners' decisions.
